Brief Background
The client hired an external investigator to perform a preliminary review of Authority disbursement records. The external investigator identified two disbursements totaling $10,054 paid by the CFO to her husband’s construction company for work that was not performed at the Authority. The CFO maintained access to multiple financial areas including the Authority’s bank accounts, payroll, credit cards, grants, etc. Although we are not aware that she was involved in the cash receipting process, she did have access to checks received in the mail. Our last audit included testing of payroll, disbursements, cash receipting, and credit card transactions. The scope reviewed was 2015-2017. Based on the limited testing performed, no significant exceptions were identified. For the investigation, we will focus on 2018 to current and if necessary assess if these past years need expanded testing from what has already been performed.
